Hi Misty,

Here's a quick rundown of what we've been up to this week:

---

Listen Carefully

Young people across America stood up this week to demand action on gun laws and school safety — and on the evening before National Walkout Day, I hosted a listening session with L.A. students to hear their thoughts on gun violence, how it touches their lives, and what they want to do about it. On Wednesday, I met a group of Dreamers at the Central Library to discuss their concerns about the future of DACA.

By Design

We are investing in new infrastructure and public spaces that will transform how Angelenos and people from around the world experience Los Angeles — and we're taking this moment to strengthen our approach to civic architecture. To help bring a unified vision to the work, I have selected L.A. Times architecture critic Christopher Hawthorne to be the City's first-ever Chief Design Officer. Christopher has an extraordinary creative eye and a deep understanding of urban design — and I'm proud to welcome him to my administration.
